

Planting the seeds for a sustainable tomorrow.

Scotiabank Foundation - Beneficiary Stories

“Most of the time, you plant to sell. During the planting process, you will be eating too. The garden will take a little while to come because most of these things take 6 weeks/3 months. Bhaigan, squash pumpkin, peppers, tomatoes, ochroes... The kind of support you getting from the Foundation, it's up to you to flop; and you don't want to flop, because on the way to success, we passing failure straight.”
- Desmond Christopher, Local Farmer – St. Charles, Gasparillo

Last year, as part of the global United Nations-led initiative to accelerate and support efforts to address climate change, Scotiabank proudly joined the Net-Zero Banking Alliance. Locally, we recognise our role in achieving the global goal and, as we embark on this journey, the Scotia Foundation has teamed up with the Sure Foundation to contribute to food sustainability via the distribution of seedlings amongst farmers and households in rural areas.

Learn more on tt.scotiabank.com/about-scotiabank/giving-back

Scotiabank®