Remember that it is still important that you read and be familiar with the full Code.
Over the past 187 years, Scotiabank has grown into one of Canada’s longest-enduring companies, and one of the world’s top financial institutions. Our present strength is the result of the consistent and unwavering commitment to our core values: Respect, Integrity, Passion and Accountability. Our values serve as the foundation for everything we do here, at the Bank. From the investments we make, the organizations and people we bank and the employees we hire and promote.

Protecting the Bank, our values and our reputation requires constant vigilance. One of the tools we use in this effort is our Code of Conduct. The Code sets out the standards of ethical behaviour that each of us is required to follow. It is your responsibility to read, understand and comply with the Code. Please contact your manager if you have any questions.

Doing the right thing matters. It’s up to each and every one of us to uphold and role model the principles outlined in our Code of Conduct, for the benefit of our fellow employees, our customers and our shareholders.

Sincerely,

Brian J. Porter
President & Chief Executive Officer

Glossary

Key sources of guidance and advice
.......................................................... 33
The Scotiabank Code of Conduct (the “Code”) describes the standards of conduct required of employees, contingent workers, directors and officers of The Bank of Nova Scotia and its direct and indirect subsidiaries located in various regions around the world (“Scotiabank” or the “Bank”).

If you are uncertain about what is the most appropriate course of action in a particular situation, this Code should be your first point of reference. If there is something in this Code that you don’t understand, or if you require additional guidance, ask your Manager or a more senior officer.

Consult the glossary at the end of this document for definitions of some of the key terms used in this Code.

I. Roles and responsibilities

Over the years, our customers and employees have trusted us to deliver financial solutions and advice to help them meet their goals for every future. It is this confidence in our Bank, rooted in our Code that has allowed us to develop longstanding and deep relationships that span generations.

New employees, contingent workers, directors, and officers are given a copy of or link to this Code when they are hired or elected and must acknowledge that they have received and read it. All Scotiabankers are required to receive, read and comply with this Code, and any other applicable Scotiabank policies and affirm their compliance on an annual basis. Ask questions when unclear about your responsibilities or the appropriateness of a particular action, and report any actual, suspected or potential breach of this Code immediately.

Managers have additional responsibilities to be aware of and communicate applicable laws, regulatory requirements and internal policies, procedures, processes, as well as manage and supervise employees or contingent workers to ensure that the law, regulatory requirements, this Code and other internal policies, procedures and processes are followed. Managers must also respond to questions from employees or contingent workers, and ensure that any actual, suspected or potential breach of this Code is dealt with or escalated in accordance with applicable policies, procedures, and processes.

Executive Management and the Board of Directors have further additional responsibilities. The President and Chief Executive Officer of Scotiabank bears overall responsibility for ensuring that this Code is followed throughout the organization, and reports on compliance with this Code every year to the Board of Directors or one of its Committees. The Board of Directors is responsible for reviewing and approving the content of this Code and must authorize changes to this Code and any waivers.

These roles and responsibilities are summarized in the following chart.
II. Consequences of failing to comply with the code

Unethical or illegal conduct puts Scotiabank, and in some cases its customers, shareholders, employees and other stakeholders, at risk.

For example:
- Scotiabank and/or employees, directors, and officers could be subject to criminal or regulatory sanction, loss of license, lawsuits or fines.
- Negative publicity from a breach of this Code could affect our customers’ or potential customers’ confidence in Scotiabank, and their willingness to do business with us.

Adherence to both the letter and the spirit of this Code is therefore a condition of employment at, or a contingent worker’s assignment with, Scotiabank. Any breach, or willful ignorance of the breaches of others, will be treated as a serious matter, and may result in discipline up to and including termination of employment, or in the case of contingent workers, termination of assignment or contract. Scotiabank may also be required to report certain types of breaches to law enforcement or regulatory authorities, in which case a breach or willful ignorance of the breaches of others may result in your being subject to criminal or civil penalties.

You should also be familiar with the Code addendum, Key Sources of Guidance and Advice.
Our guiding principles

Scotiabank’s six guiding principles are aligned with our values and form the building blocks on which this Code rests. Living up to them is an essential part of meeting our corporate goals, adhering to our values, and safeguarding Scotiabank’s reputation for integrity and ethical business practices.

The six principles are:

1. Follow the law wherever Scotiabank does business.
2. Avoid putting yourself or Scotiabank in a conflict of interest position.
3. Conduct yourself honestly and with integrity.
4. Respect confidentiality, and protect the integrity and security of assets, communications, information and transactions.
5. Treat everyone fairly, equitably and professionally.
6. Honour our commitments to the communities in which we operate.
I. Your responsibilities

Ask questions…comply…report!

Scotiabank is expected to comply with the laws that govern their activities. There are legal and regulatory requirements in each of the countries in which we operate. Scotiabank must follow these laws – both the letter and the spirit – wherever it does business, and so must you.

There are also internal Scotiabank policies and procedures, which have been authorized by the Board of Directors or senior management of the Bank or its subsidiaries, that reflect how Scotiabank manages its business strategy and risk appetite. Scotiabankers are expected to know the policies and procedures that are relevant to their activities, act in accordance with the letter and spirit of these policies and procedures, and comply with them. Sometimes policies and procedures may seem cumbersome, but remember that they have been developed with legal, regulatory, business, and/or risk management considerations in mind.

If you are unclear about legal, regulatory or other requirements, consult your Manager. If necessary, he or she can seek the advice of the Compliance Department or Legal Department.

Advice that can put Scotiabank at risk

You are expected to inform customers about Scotiabank products and services. However, do not give specific financial, trust, tax, investment or legal advice unless it is part of your job responsibilities, you hold the appropriate qualifications and licenses and all applicable regulatory requirements are met.

The act of giving advice to a customer can create greater than normal legal obligations, and put you and Scotiabank at risk. Refer customers who request advisory services to their own advisors, or to those employees, areas, or subsidiaries that are authorized to do this type of business with customers.

Immediately report any actual, suspected or potential violations of law, regulations, or internal policies (including instances where you see a risk that appears to have been overlooked or ignored by others) through one of the options described in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide or using the other avenues described in Getting help and reporting problems and irregularities.

II. Conflicting requirements

In the case of any conflict between the provisions of this Code and any laws, regulatory requirements or any other policies, procedures or guidelines applicable to your employment duties, you must adhere to the more stringent requirement to the extent a conflict exists.

If you encounter a situation where this Code or other Scotiabank policies appear to conflict with local cultural traditions, business practices or legal requirements of the country in which you are located, you must consult with the Compliance Department. Keep a written record of such enquiries and responses.
I. Personal conflicts of interest

You have an obligation to act in the best interests of Scotiabank. A conflict of interest can arise when there is a conflict between what is in your personal interest (financial or otherwise) and what is in the best interest of Scotiabank or a customer. Even if you do not have an actual conflict of interest, if other people perceive one, they may still be concerned that you cannot act properly and impartially. For this reason, it is important to avoid the appearance of a conflict, as well as an actual one. Being seen or thought to be in a conflict of interest can damage your reputation, and the reputation of Scotiabank.

If you find yourself in a conflict of interest position or a situation where you believe that others perceive you to be in a position of conflict, you must immediately advise your Manager so that action can be taken to resolve the situation. This is the best way to protect yourself and your reputation for honesty, fairness and objectivity.

Your Manager, who may consult a more senior Manager or the Compliance Department if necessary, will decide if a conflict exists or if there is the potential for the appearance of a conflict that could be damaging to Scotiabank’s reputation, as outlined in the Reputational Risk Policy. The sections that follow describe some common conflicts that sometimes arise and provide advice on what to do if you encounter any of these situations.

a. Transactions that involve yourself, family members or close associates

When you deal with Scotiabank as a customer, your accounts must be established, and your personal transactions and account activities conducted, in the same manner as those of any non-employee customer. This means that you may only transact business, make entries or access information on your own accounts using the same systems and facilities available to non-employee customers. (For example, you can use ABM or online or mobile banking to transfer funds between your own accounts, since this service is generally available to non-employee customers). Do not use internal platforms, applications, or systems to access your own personal customer profiles and accounts.

The accounts, transactions and other account activities of your family members, friends and other close associates must also be established and conducted in the same manner as those of other customers. Do not set up accounts on your own behalf, or on behalf of these individuals, without the review and agreement of your Manager. Also, only transact business or make entries or enquiries on accounts of family members, friends or close associates with appropriate authorization from the customer (e.g. in the normal course of business as permitted under a relevant customer agreement, or as authorized by a written trading authority on file). Do not use internal platforms, applications, or systems to access their customer profile without such authorization.

Under no circumstances may you authorize or renew a loan, or lending or margin limit increase to yourself, a family member, a friend or other close associate. Nor may you waive fees, reverse charges or confer any benefit or non-standard pricing or access Customer Information System (CIS) profiles with respect to your own accounts or those of family, friends or other close associates without the prior review and agreement of your Manager.

b. Close personal relationships in the workplace

Conflicts of interest (or the appearance of a conflict of interest) can arise when you work with those with whom you share a close personal relationship (such as family relationships, romantic relationships and/or financial relationships) and can also raise serious concerns about favouritism and in the case of certain close personal relationships, the validity of consent. You must immediately disclose potential or actual conflicts of interest related to close personal relationships in the workplace, using Need Help Raising a Concern, so that appropriate action can be taken.

c. Objectivity

Do not let your own interests or personal relationships affect your ability to make the right business decisions. Family members, friends and other close associates should have no influence on your work-related actions or decisions. Make decisions about meeting a customer’s needs, engaging a supplier or service provider, or hiring an individual on a strictly business basis.
Principle 2 | Avoid putting yourself or Scotiabank in a conflict of interest position continued

d. Outside business activities, financial interests or employment

Work outside of your employment with Scotiabank is permitted if there is no conflict of interest and if the satisfactory performance of your job functions with Scotiabank is not prejudiced or negatively impacted in any way.

In addition, the following rules apply:

• You must not engage in work that competes with Scotiabank, or in any activity likely to compromise or potentially harm Scotiabank’s position or reputation.

• You must not conduct outside business on Scotiabank time, use Scotiabank confidential information (including information about Scotiabank employees and customers) or use Scotiabank equipment or facilities to conduct an outside business interest. This includes soliciting other employees or Scotiabank customers to participate in an outside business activity.

• You owe a duty to Scotiabank to advance its legitimate interests when the opportunity to do so arises. You may not take for yourself a business opportunity that is discovered in the course of your Scotiabank employment, or through the use of Scotiabank property, information (including customer information) or your position.

• Neither you nor members of your household should have a financial interest in, or with, a customer, supplier or service provider of Scotiabank, or any other entity having a close business relationship with Scotiabank, if this would put you in a conflict of interest.8

• Before taking on or continuing an outside business interest, making or holding a financial interest in a Scotiabank customer, supplier or service provider, or other entity having a close business relationship with Scotiabank, or committing to a job outside Scotiabank working hours, discuss this with your Manager to be sure these activities do not create a conflict.

Local regulatory requirements, including securities legislation, or local compliance policies may impose further restrictions on engaging in outside business activities by requiring:

• prior disclosure;

• prior approval by the Bank;

• notice to applicable local regulator; and/or

• approval by applicable local regulator

Please refer to your local business line compliance policies for further information.

If you have questions, discuss with your Manager and/or your Business Line Compliance to be sure the proposed outside business activities do not create a conflict.

e. Misuse of confidential information

You are regularly entrusted with confidential information – information that is not or may not be publicly known – about Scotiabank, its customers and your fellow employees or others. This information is given to you so that you can do your work. It is wrong, and in some cases illegal, for you to access confidential information without a valid business reason to do so, or use confidential information in order to obtain a personal benefit or to further your own interests. It is also wrong to disclose confidential information to any other person who does not require the information to carry out their job responsibilities on behalf of Scotiabank.

8 This policy does not apply to holdings in the publicly traded securities of suppliers or customers, so long as Scotiabank policies with respect to misuse of confidential information and insider trading and tipping are complied with.
f. Directorships

Obtaining Approval: As an employee or officer, you may not accept a corporate directorship unless you have obtained approval from your Manager and the Compliance Department. The Compliance Department will seek any other necessary approvals pursuant to the Corporate Directorships Policy. If you are a new employee, immediately report any directorships in accordance with these requirements, and seek approval where necessary. If you change your role within Scotiabank, advise your new Manager of any directorships, even if the directorship was previously approved. He or she can decide whether the prior approval must be reconfirmed, given your new duties.

Directorships of public companies are prohibited. Exceptions require the approval of the President & Chief Executive Officer of Scotiabank.

Also bear in mind that:

- Directorships on the boards of companies that compete with Scotiabank will not generally be approved; and
- Scotiabank reserves the right to require you to give up any directorships that it determines pose a conflict.

Scotiabank does not typically require that employees seek approval for the following kinds of directorships (on the presumption that they are unlikely to pose any conflicts):

- non-profit, public service corporations such as religious, educational, cultural, recreational, social welfare, philanthropic or charitable institutions or residential condominium corporations; and
- private, family-owned corporations (greater than 50%) incorporated to administer the personal or financial affairs of an officer or employee, or one or more living or deceased members of the officer’s or employee’s family (family includes spouses, parents, spouse’s parents, children, grandchildren and spouses of children or grandchildren).

However, approval will be needed for certain employees that are registrants with certain regulatory authorities (e.g. MFDA, IIROC). The Bank or regulatory authorities may attach specific conditions to any approval to address concerns including the management of potential conflicts of interest.

Additional reporting requirements for vice president level employees and above: While permission is not required, all employees at the vice president level and above must, however, report directorships in non-profit or family-owned corporations to their Manager and the Compliance Department.

For further guidance, refer to the Corporate Directorships Policy.

9 Scotiabank may ask an officer or employee to act as a director of a subsidiary, affiliate or another corporate entity where it determines such a directorship to be in Scotiabank’s interests. These directorships must be approved in accordance with applicable policies, procedures and processes.

10 Note: You are not required to report a directorship of a family-owned corporation whose sole purpose is to own the home in which you reside.
Principle 2 | Avoid putting yourself or Scotiabank in a conflict of interest position

h. Purchasing Scotiabank assets

To avoid the appearance that Scotiabank is giving an advantage, you or members of your household may not purchase Scotiabank assets such as automobiles, office equipment or computer systems, unless:

- the purchase is made at an advertised public auction;
- it has otherwise been established to Scotiabank's satisfaction that the price being paid is reasonable and your business unit head has approved the transaction; or
- the purchase is made under an approved Scotiabank program.

i. Administered or repossessed property

Neither you nor your family may use or purchase goods that have been repossessed by Scotiabank, except with the permission of your Group or Country Head. He or she will review the situation and consider whether the transaction would both be, and appear to be, fair.\(^{11}\)

j. Related parties

Directors, certain senior officers, their spouses and minor children, as well as certain other entities such as companies which they control, are referred to as "related parties" (or "connected parties" in some countries) and there are laws governing their dealings with Scotiabank. If you have been advised that you are a "related party", you must abide by the policies and procedures which have been put in place to meet applicable legal requirements.

\(^{11}\) If you work for a securities subsidiary, or any other subsidiary or area where a fiduciary obligation may be imposed by law, you may not use, or become the owner of, property held in fiduciary accounts under administration, unless you or a family member are a beneficiary or co-trustee of an estate and the governing document specifically permits you to use, or become the owner of, the property being administered.
II. Corporate conflicts of interest

Conflicts of interest can also occur between Scotiabank and its customers. For example:

• Scotiabank’s interests could conflict with its obligations to a customer; or

• Scotiabank’s obligations to one customer could conflict with its obligations to another.

If you are a lending or advisory officer, be alert to situations where there may be a conflict or the appearance of one. If you become aware of a potential conflict, observe policies, procedures, and processes regarding confidentiality and advise your Manager or Compliance contact as set out in the Key Sources of Guidance Advice Addendum to ensure the situation is managed appropriately.

a. Political contributions

To avoid conflict of interests with political or state entities, Scotiabank in accordance with the Political Contributions Policy will not make corporate contributions to any political party. Scotiabank executives are also not permitted to use Bank resources or the Bank’s name to help organize, promote or host political fundraisers.

Principle 3 | Conduct yourself honestly and with integrity

Our success depends on the honesty and integrity of all Scotiabankers. Always remember that your conduct has a direct effect on how customers think about Scotiabank and how it reflects on you.

I. Illegal or fraudulent activities

a. Misappropriation

Stealing customer or Scotiabank funds or information, attempting to defraud a customer or Scotiabank, or colluding with or knowingly helping others to do so may be grounds for termination of your employment for cause, or in the case of contingent workers termination of assignment or contract, and possible civil or criminal liability. This includes, but is not limited to, falsifying your expense claims, misuse of employee benefits such as corporate credit cards or employee banking privileges (including purchasing foreign currency for anyone other than eligible dependents) or medical/dental benefits, or manipulating Scotiabank’s clearing or payments systems (including but not limited to cheque writing and any ABM, online or mobile banking transactions) or General Ledger accounts to obtain credit or funds not rightfully yours. You must follow Scotiabank’s expense policies and procedures governing authorization and reimbursement of reasonable employment expenses.

b. Improperly accessing records, funds or facilities

Never use your Scotiabank access to funds, facilities or systems to do something improper. You may access, accumulate data and use records, computer files and programs (including personnel files, financial statements, online customer and employee profiles and other customer or employee information) only for their intended, Scotiabank-approved purposes. You may not access or use Scotiabank facilities on behalf of third parties or for unreasonable or frequent personal use. Limited use of Scotiabank mailroom facilities to receive personal postal mail is permitted. Nor may you access customer information for personal reasons or to provide the information to a third party unless this disclosure is authorized by Scotiabank. See Principle 4, Privacy and Confidentiality, for more guidance.

c. Creating false records

Creating false records is a breach of the law and this Code, and could result in termination of employment and legal proceedings against you by Scotiabank and the affected individuals. Forgery – even when not intended to defraud – is a crime, a betrayal of customer trust and a serious violation of this Code. You may not, under any circumstances, create a false signature. Knowingly making or allowing false or misleading entries to be made to any Scotiabank account, record, model, system or document is a crime of Fraud and a serious violation of this Code (this includes, but is not limited to, inflating sales numbers to receive higher commissions, falsifying sales that did not occur or colluding with customers to record and collect commissions on falsified sales). In addition, undisclosed or unrecorded Scotiabank accounts, funds, assets or liabilities are strictly prohibited. Immediately report your knowledge or discovery of any such account, instrument or misleading or false entry as described by the one Whistleblower Policy which is one of the options in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide.

Improperly accessing records

You may not use your access to Scotiabank systems or facilities for non-business purposes.

For example, you may not view the account or personnel records of another employee or customer for personal reasons, or share contact details or financial information about a customer with third parties, such as mortgage brokers.

Any access to Bank records without authorization is a breach of this Code and may subject you to discipline, up to and including termination of your employment.
d. Bribes, payoffs and other corrupt practices
Scotiabank prohibits offering, or accepting, directly or through an intermediary, kickbacks, extraordinary commissions, facilitation payments or any other improper kind of payment or benefit to or from suppliers or service providers, customers, public officials or others in exchange for favourable treatment or consideration.

Accepting money or gifts from intermediaries, such as dealers, lawyers, consultants, brokers, other professionals, suppliers and service providers in exchange for selecting them to provide services is prohibited. Intermediaries should be selected on the basis of qualifications, product or service quality, price and benefit to Scotiabank.

For additional guidance on Scotiabank’s policies with respect to the prevention of bribery and corruption and how to escalate concerns, refer to the Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption Policy. You may also contact Conduct.Risk@scotiabank.com for further advice or guidance.

Trading restrictions and monitoring
Regardless of your knowledge, in some circumstances Scotiabank may impose trading prohibition periods or other restrictions applicable to you. If your job makes it likely that you may encounter inside information, Scotiabank can also require that you do your securities trading only through brokerage accounts monitored by Scotiabank as well as impose other rules. These rules are to help protect you and Scotiabank.

e. Insider trading and tipping
In the course of your duties, you may become aware of confidential business information about Scotiabank or another public company. Some confidential information is sensitive enough that, if other people knew it, they would consider it important in deciding whether to buy or sell that company’s securities, or it would be reasonable to expect that the price of the securities could be significantly affected. This kind of information is commonly called inside information and you may not act on this information for your, or a close friend or relative’s benefit (this is known as insider trading).

You also may not pass on (or “tip”) inside information about Scotiabank or any other public company to anyone except those persons who need to know that specific information in the necessary course of business. This activity is commonly called tipping.

There are very strict laws forbidding both insider trading and tipping, and violations carry severe penalties. Basically, these laws require that, if you have knowledge of inside information, you may not buy or sell (for yourself or for anyone else) stocks, bonds or other securities issued by that company (including derivatives linked to that company’s securities), nor may you suggest or induce anyone else to do so.12

If you are likely to encounter inside information you should become familiar with the specific policies and procedures that Scotiabank and its subsidiaries have put in place to restrict access to inside information, including information barriers. The Compliance Department is also available to provide you with advice.

f. Other trading restrictions
Employees, directors and officers of Scotiabank are prohibited under provisions of the Bank Act from trading in calls or puts (i.e. options to buy or sell securities at a set price) on Scotiabank securities.

Additionally, you may not short Scotiabank securities (i.e. you cannot sell securities you do not own). See the Scotiabank Employee Personal Trading Policy for further guidance.

12 Where permitted by the Compliance Department, sales and trading staff may continue to accept unsolicited orders from customers.
g. Requirement to disclose a criminal charge or conviction
You are required to disclose to Scotiabank if you are charged or convicted of theft, fraud or any other criminal offence in a domestic, foreign or military court. If you are charged with or convicted of an offence of this type, you must disclose it immediately to your Manager, who will consult Employee Relations or the local Human Resources department for further direction.

h. Illegal or anti-competitive practices
To promote fair and open competition among businesses in similar industries, many countries have competition laws or trade regulations, with severe penalties for violation. Do not collude or co-operate with any other institution in anti-competitive activities. These include arrangements for or discussions intended to influence market prices, rates on key market interest rate or commodity indexes or on publicly traded equities, or about interest rates on loans and deposits, service fees, other product features or types or classes of persons to whom services will be made available or withheld. You may participate in industry associations, such as local Bankers Associations, to develop industry positions on legislative or other issues, or to set standards for the use of common facilities or networks. However, these meetings must not be used to discuss competitive policies and practices. If you have any doubt whether a discussion would violate competition laws, do not participate and consult with your Manager or the Legal Department.

II. Improper transaction prevention

a. Know your customer/understand your customer’s transaction Knowing your customers and understanding your customers’ transactions are fundamental tenets of the financial services industry. Knowing your customers helps you to better serve customer needs, identify sales opportunities, meet regulatory requirements, avoid facilitating unethical behaviour and protect ourselves during disputes and litigation. It also allows you to contribute to national and global efforts to combat criminal and terrorist activity. All transactions must be authorized and handled in an approved manner, and must adhere to applicable standards for knowing your customer. Do not undertake, participate in or facilitate any customer transactions that are prohibited by law, regulation or policy that, by Scotiabank’s standards, could be considered improper or suspect.

b. Detecting and reporting suspicious or improper transactions
You should familiarize yourself with the policies, procedures and processes related to anti-money laundering, anti-terrorist financing and sanctions compliance. Be alert to any illegal, suspicious or unusual activity, including fraud, money laundering, terrorist financing or breach of government-imposed sanctions requirements. Promptly report any unusual account activity to your Manager or, in the case of suspected money laundering, terrorist financing or sanctions breaches, your designated Anti-Money Laundering Compliance Officer/Local Sanctions Officer. If you fail to report a transaction that there are reasonable grounds to suspect is associated with money laundering, terrorist financing or a sanctions breach, you may be committing a criminal offence. It is also a breach of this Code, and an offense in many jurisdictions, to warn a customer that a report has been or will be made about them or their activities.

Note: Some permitted exceptions are discussions regarding syndicated loans, underwritings and other kinds of authorized consortia, and certain government lending programs. In these cases, limit discussions to the specific transaction or program.
III. Ethical business practices

a. Offering and accepting gifts and entertainment or charitable donations or sponsorships

Customers and business associates often try to show their appreciation by providing gifts and entertainment to Scotiabank employees or by making charitable donations to a charity on behalf of, or through sponsorship of, an employee. Similarly, Scotiabank employees may wish to show their appreciation to our customers and suppliers by offering gifts and entertainment or making charitable donations to a charity on behalf of, or through sponsorship of, a customer or business associate. Offering or accepting gifts or entertainment or charitable donations or sponsorships can be problematic because it may lead others to believe that your decisions have been improperly influenced. In some cases, such as where high-value gifts or entertainment have been offered or accepted, this could be perceived as offering or accepting a bribe.

In general, the giving and accepting of gifts and entertainment or making charitable donations or sponsorship is only permitted if:

- the gift, entertainment, donation or sponsorship is modest\(^*\) and would not affect the recipient’s objectivity;
- there is no suggestion that the donor is trying to obligate or improperly influence the recipient;
- offering or accepting is “normal business practice” for the purposes of courtesy and good business relations;
- offering or accepting is legal and consistent with generally understood ethical standards;
- neither you nor Scotiabank would be embarrassed if the public became aware of the circumstances of the gift or entertainment, donation or sponsorship;
- it is not a gift or prize of cash (including gift cards, gift certificates, prepaid cards, vouchers, coupons, etc.), bonds, negotiable securities, personal loans, or other valuable items (such as airline tickets for your personal use, or use of a vacation property).

Before offering or accepting entertainment involving air travel, luxury accommodation or exclusive tickets (such as to the Olympics, US Open, Wimbledon or the World Cup), obtain the approval of your Group or Country Head (or his or her designate), who must consult their Compliance Department for further guidance.

Remember the following when considering whether to accept a gift or entertainment or donation to a charity on your behalf or through sponsoring you:

- You may not use your position for improper personal gain. Tactfully discourage customers, brokers, suppliers or others in business with Scotiabank if they suggest offering benefits to you or your family.
- You should not accept any donations on your behalf, or sponsorships, for charities for which you are in some way associated other than donations or sponsorships of nominal amounts.
- Where it would be extraordinarily impolite or otherwise inappropriate to refuse a gift of obvious value, you may accept it on behalf of Scotiabank. In these cases, immediately report the gift to your Manager who will advise you how to deal with it. Such gifts may not be taken for your personal use or enjoyment.

Remember the following when considering whether to offer a gift or entertainment or donation or sponsorship to a charity:

- Be especially careful when offering gifts or entertainment to public officials or making charitable donations on a public official’s behalf or at his or her request as this may be perceived as a bribe. In addition, many countries have strict laws regarding offering anything of value to these individuals or to third parties at their request. Please also refer to any specific policies within your business unit relating to the offering of gifts and entertainment.
- Always comply with the Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption Policy in any dealings with public officials. Hospitality or Entertainment expenses to public officials that exceed US$100 in value will require additional approvals as set out in the Anti-Bribery & Anti-Corruption Policy.

For additional information on acceptable gifts and entertainment, consult the Gifts and Entertainment Guidelines.

\(^*\) Through a written policy approved by the applicable Group Head, a Business Unit may set specific acceptable limits or amounts regarding permitted gifts and entertainment.
Principle 3 | Conduct yourself honestly and with integrity

Subject to the special considerations discussed below relating to government officials and public office holders ("public officials"), examples of the types of gifts and entertainment or charitable donations or sponsorships that are acceptable to offer or accept include:

- occasional meals, refreshments, invitations to local events;
- small, occasional gifts for special occasions such as an anniversary, significant event or holiday;
- inexpensive advertising or promotional materials, such as pens or key chains;
- inexpensive awards to recognize service and accomplishment in civic, charitable, educational, or religious organizations;
- donations on behalf of, or sponsorships of, individuals of modest or nominal amounts;
- modest honoraria and reimbursement for reasonable expenses (if not paid by Scotiabank) for Scotiabank-related speaking engagements or written presentations; or
- gifts or entertainment or charitable donations or sponsorships clearly motivated by obvious family or close personal relationships, rather than business dealings.

Where the monetary value of an item is not nominal or modest in nature, you should consult with your Manager regarding the appropriateness of the gesture. Your Manager should consult with the Compliance Department for guidance on difficult situations.

Coercive tied selling

Never pressure a customer to buy a product or service that he or she does not want as a condition for obtaining another product or service from Scotiabank. (This practice, which is illegal in some jurisdictions, is sometimes called coercive tied selling).

This should not be confused with other practices, such as giving preferential pricing to customers who already have business with Scotiabank or bundling products and services. These practices are legal and accepted in some countries, but may be illegal in others, so ensure that you are aware of all applicable local laws.

b. Dealing ethically with our customers, employees and others

As Scotiabankers, we do not compromise our ethics for the sake of meeting our sales, profit or other targets or goals. Steering a customer to an inappropriate or unnecessary product harms the customer, damages our reputation and may be illegal in certain situations and jurisdictions.

Never take unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, concealment, abuse of confidential business or personal information, misrepresentation of material facts, or any other unfair-dealing or unethical business practice.

If you discover misrepresentations or misstatements in information provided to customers or the public, consult your Manager about how to correct those statements.

All applicants for employment at any level within Scotiabank must be considered based on appropriate qualification, and compensation must be appropriate for the work being performed and should be consistent with the compensation paid to other employees for similar work. Never give preferential treatment in hiring, promotion, or compensation decisions to individuals based on your personal relationship with them, or their family, political, governmental or other affiliations. The employment of a public official or a Politically Exposed Person (PEP), or a family member or close associate of a public official or PEP, could give rise to a perception that favourable treatment has been bestowed upon such an individual and could put you and Scotiabank at risk of breaking the law. It is important to be aware of Scotiabank’s relationship with public officials (for example, where Scotiabank is in the process of applying for a license from an official’s department) and how the employment by Scotiabank of a family member or close associate of an official could be perceived.

Never seek to obtain personal advantages from your customer or other business relationships. For example, do not:

- use your connection with Scotiabank so that you or your family can borrow from or become indebted to customers; or
- use your position to gain preferred rates or access to goods and services15, whether for you personally or for friends or relatives, unless the benefit is conferred as part of a Scotiabank-approved plan available to all or designated groups of employees.

15 For example: Do not use your position to gain access to trading facilities or opportunities to further your personal investments, such as gaining access to new stock issues or hard-to-get securities.
IV. Engaging third parties

In conducting business, Scotiabank uses suppliers or service providers and contractors and may enter into outsourcing arrangements or other strategic alliances. If you are authorized to engage third parties, you must do so in compliance with the Global Procurement Policy and should engage only those who are competent and reputable, and who have business conduct standards comparable to our own. Service providers, vendors and other third parties providing goods and services to Scotiabank should always follow the Scotiabank’s Supplier Code of Conduct. Engaging family members to act in such a capacity is considered a conflict of interest.

V. Communications and representations

Trust is the basis of our relationships with our customers, fellow employees, shareholders and the communities in which we operate. You must not knowingly mislead customers, the general public or other employees by making false or misleading statements or by withholding information.

a. Advertising

You should be aware that Scotiabank is subject to regulation with respect to advertising, which includes any written or verbal representations about Scotiabank products and services that are directed at the general public (e.g., social media, online, telephone, e-mail). If approving advertising is not part of your job, ensure that you follow established approval procedures or get the approval of your manager or department head before initiating any advertisements or representations.

b. Proper public disclosure

Scotiabank is committed to providing timely, accurate, balanced and widely distributed disclosure of material information, as required by law or regulation. For additional information, consult the Statement of Disclosure Policy and Practices and Mandate of the Disclosure Committee. Unless it is part of your job responsibilities, refer inquiries from the financial community, shareholders and media to Global Communications.
c. Making public statements and media contact

Unless you are authorized to speak to reporters or the media on behalf of Scotiabank as part of your normal duties, refer all media enquiries to a designated spokesperson. Be especially careful never to respond to questions about a matter where litigation is pending or in process (without prior authorization of the Legal Department) and always respect Scotiabank’s duty of confidentiality to its customers, employees and others. Sometimes you may be asked to give presentations or express views on matters generally relating to banking or other financial services, usually due to your position with Scotiabank or acknowledged expertise. Speaking opportunities at conferences and industry events should be treated as public events and you should expect that media may be in attendance or people may share the information you present in social media. Please ensure that your manager provides approval for any public speaking events you may participate in.

Even if you are presenting in your own personal capacity and you’ve made that clear, please remember that by the nature of your title, the public may still interpret your views as Bank views. Think carefully about what you say and how you say it in any public forum.

d. Expressing your personal views

As a private citizen, you are entitled to express your personal views. However, be careful not to give the impression that you are speaking on behalf of Scotiabank or expressing Scotiabank’s perspective, unless you have obtained approval from your Manager and Global Communications. This applies to all forms of communication (such as statements, speeches, letters or articles) and all communications media or networks (such as newspaper, radio, television, E-mail, social media or the Internet). You should also bear in mind that your conduct outside the workplace may reflect on Scotiabank. Use common sense when offering your personal opinions in a public forum (such as social media, internet blogs, or newsgroups) and refrain from disparaging competitors or making statements that might discredit Scotiabank or its products and services. Also, take particular care not to disclose confidential information about Scotiabank, customers, employees or others.

e. Use of the Scotiabank brand, name and reputation

Our brand and reputation are significant corporate assets. They should only be used to further Scotiabank business. Never use Scotiabank’s name, logo, letterhead or reputation to gain personal advantages or to further your own interests, or for anything other than approved purposes.

VI. Cooperate with audits and investigations

Always cooperate fully with any investigations by management or the Compliance, Legal, Internal Audit, Corporate Security, Information Security & Control, Fraud Management or Human Resource Departments. Be straightforward and truthful when dealing with internal and external investigations, external auditors and regulators. However, keep in mind Scotiabank’s confidentiality guidelines and procedures for releasing information.

You must not destroy, discard, withhold or alter records pertinent to a regulatory authority, an audit, a legal or governmental investigation.
I. Privacy and confidentiality
You have an obligation to safeguard the personal and business information entrusted to us by customers, employees, suppliers, service providers and others, as well as the confidentiality of Scotiabank’s own affairs. This obligation continues even after you leave Scotiabank.

a. Obligation to protect personal and confidential information

Customers, employees, suppliers, service providers and others trust Scotiabank to keep their personal information and confidential business information safe and secure. Protecting their privacy and the confidentiality of their dealings with us is essential to safeguarding our reputation. Protecting personal and confidential information is also a legal requirement.

You are expected to be aware of, and follow, the policies and procedures that Scotiabank has put in place to protect personal and confidential information and to comply with applicable laws and regulations, including the Scotiabank Incident and Breach Management Procedures. Those policies and procedures explain how to report, respond to and remediate a breach of privacy or confidentiality.

All information about or received from, individual or business customers or employees or others (including prospective customers and employees) should be presumed to be confidential information unless the contrary is clear. Keep in mind that even a seemingly harmless or helpful disclosure of customer or employee or others’ personal information (such as to a customer’s family member) could be a breach of this Code and can have serious consequences for you, Scotiabank and the customers involved.

Never access customer or employee or other confidential information without a legitimate business reason and appropriate authorization. “Snooping” into files of customers or other employees or others is prohibited. For example, you may not view customer profiles or account information of family members, friends or acquaintances without a valid business reason to do so. Scotiabank monitors access to and use of information technology services and physical storage facilities in order to prevent and detect improper access to information. Snooping is a breach of the law and this Code, and could result in discipline, up to and including, termination of employment or, in the case of contingent workers, termination of assignment or contract, and legal proceedings against you by Scotiabank and the affected individuals.

b. Appropriate handling of personal and confidential information

It is your responsibility to safeguard and appropriately handle any personal or confidential information which you have custody of or access to, or which you use. This is the case even when you are disposing of waste or damaged materials.

In order to appropriately safeguard personal and confidential information, you must ensure that any new Scotiabank initiative or service and any new use of personal information that you are involved with has undergone a Privacy Impact Assessment, a Security Threat/Risk Assessment and all suggested privacy and security protections are implemented, before it is launched.

If you become aware of a breach or potential breach of privacy or confidentiality, immediately report it to your manager or through one of the options described in the Key Sources of Guidance and Advice addendum to this Code, or in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide so that steps can be taken to prevent, minimize or mitigate any negative impact on customers, employees, other stakeholders, or Scotiabank.
Principle 4 | Respect confidentiality, and protect the integrity and security of assets, communications, information and transactions

Appropriate handling of personal and confidential information includes the following:

- Follow policies, procedures and processes for storing and controlling access to electronic and physical confidential information.
- Follow any policies, procedures or processes for transmitting confidential information. Do not send confidential information via non-secure media such as fax, e-mail, SMS/text, instant messaging or the Internet (this includes internal social media platforms). Follow the secure e-mail function procedures where confidential information must be sent outside Scotiabank. See the Key Sources of Guidance and Advice addendum for more information.
- Do not carelessly display confidential information (by, for example, leaving it visible on a computer monitor, or leaving confidential documents where they could be viewed, lost or stolen).
- Do not disclose confidential information to persons outside Scotiabank (including family or household members or close associates) or to others who do not require the information for their work.
- Take care when discussing confidential information where it might be overheard or intercepted (such as when using a cell phone) by, for example, being certain to whom you are speaking and ensuring that your conversation cannot be overheard by unauthorized persons. Never discuss confidential information in social settings, such as restaurants, elevators, trains and other public places.
- Destroy or dispose of information according to security requirements and policies and procedures for document retention and destruction.

II. Accuracy and integrity of transactions and records

The expectations of our customers, shareholders, regulators and other stakeholders make it essential that Scotiabank’s books and records are complete and accurate.

Everyone must play their part in ensuring the accuracy and integrity of our record-keeping and information reporting systems. Follow applicable policies, procedures, and processes to ensure that transactions:

- have a legitimate business purpose (e.g. the objective is not to achieve misleading earnings, revenue or balance sheet effect, mislead a regulator, or another unethical or illegal outcome);
- are properly authorized;
- are promptly and accurately recorded in the right accounts; and
- are adequately supported by back-up documentation.

Internal controls and procedures are in place to protect Scotiabank. Under no circumstances should you try to bypass an internal control, even if you think it is harmless or will save time. If you become aware that an internal control or procedure has been improperly bypassed or overridden, immediately report the incident using one of the options in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide.

Third parties sometimes request information about customers (including family and friends). Subject to legal exceptions, you must obtain the consent of the customer before releasing a customer’s personal or confidential business information. This includes releasing information about whether or not an individual, business or government department is actually a customer.

In some cases, you may need assistance from the Legal Department to verify if a demand for information has been properly made and documented to permit or compel you or Scotiabank to provide information under the law without customer consent. You should also be alert to situations where legal requirements may prohibit you from telling the customer about a demand for information.
Principle 4 | Respect confidentiality, and protect the integrity and security of assets, communications, information and transactions

a. Keep Scotiabank and customer assets safe

Be alert to the potential for harm, loss, corruption, misuse, unauthorized access or theft of Scotiabank or customer assets. These include:

- funds and negotiable instruments;
- physical property, premises, supplies and equipment;
- technological devices and resources such as computer systems and networks, telecommunication systems and access channels to E-mail and the Internet;
- intellectual property, including software developed by employees or provided by third parties; and
- personal and confidential information, however stored or maintained, including information held on electronic storage devices.

Be careful not to compromise security through the inappropriate or untended disclosure of information or images (e.g., posting pictures that contain Scotiabank information, taking a photo with a whiteboard in the background). Never discuss or disclose the design or operation of systems or security protection processes or procedures with anyone outside or inside Scotiabank, other than on a need-to-know basis. Never use a public cloud service from a Scotiabank computer system or device or to conduct any Bank business, unless the service has been approved by the designated committee (Cloud Governance Council). Never copy Bank files or data to service like G-Drive, Dropbox or any other service that provides Internet storage space.

Report any perceived weakness or deficiency in a system or security protection procedure to your Manager or other appropriate senior officers (e.g. Chief Information Security Officer).

b. Integrity of computer and communication systems

Computer systems, programs and other technological assets and resources must be protected from theft, unauthorized access or misuse, and intentional and unintentional loss or corruption. You must comply at all times with security policies, processes and protection requirements, including any specific requirements applicable to a system or program which you use. For example:

- use only Scotiabank-approved computer programs, systems and software; and
- safeguard all access identifiers (e.g., passwords, access codes, badges), combinations, and physical keys in your custody; do not give, lend, share or duplicate them without authorization.

c. Assets or information in the hands of third parties

If you have authorized assets or personal or confidential information to be held in the custody or safekeeping of third parties, you are responsible for ensuring that their security procedures meet or exceed Scotiabank standards. This will typically involve ensuring contractual safeguards are in place with assistance of the Legal Department and that a Risk and Control Assessment has been conducted with the assistance of Information Security & Control.

d. Use of Scotiabank property and information off-premises

When you work at home or off-site, whether occasionally or as part of an approved arrangement, and have Scotiabank assets in your custody, you are expected to keep those assets safe by knowing and following security policies and procedures. When working at home or off-site:

- consider the sensitivity of information before taking it off-premises, whether in hard copy or electronic format, and take only the minimum information required;
- ensure all confidential information is safeguarded from unauthorized access, theft, misuse, loss or corruption in keeping with applicable policies, procedures and processes; and
- never copy Scotiabank information for your or someone else’s non-work-related use without authorization.

Except as may be required for working at home or offsite, files or other information are not to be removed from Scotiabank premises without authorization.

e. Appropriate use of information technology and services

Electronic and telecommunications facilities and systems, such as computers, Internet access, voice mail, e-mail, fax machine, scanners and telephone, are provided to you to enable you to do your job. Any other use, except for reasonable and occasional personal use, is not allowed. Scotiabank information technology services are monitored for inappropriate use.
Principle 4 | Respect confidentiality, and protect the integrity and security of assets, communications, information and transactions

IV. Digital communications, use and representation

Inappropriate internet use outside the workplace could subject you or Scotiabank or its customers or other stakeholders to legal, reputational, privacy, security or other risks. If you choose to offer your personal opinions online, use common sense and be careful not to give the impression you are speaking on behalf of Scotiabank or expressing a Scotiabank-approved perspective.

Scotiabank’s policy is to be truthful and non-misleading in all communications and representations, written and verbal. This includes communications by e-mail, or using web-based public forums such as internet “blogs”, chat rooms, newsgroups, social media etc. (otherwise known as ‘digital communications’). You should also be aware of and comply with all applicable policies or procedures with respect to the sending of e-mails and other digital communications.

Some rules to follow when using digital communications include the following:

- Always use appropriate and professional language;
- Consider the appropriateness of using Scotiabank e-mail as a point of contact for third parties;
- Unless you are a specially designated person for whom it forms part of your normal duties, refrain from commenting on Scotiabank, its business activities or competitors in any online public forum;
- Never post material obtained from or associated with Scotiabank that is damaging to the interests of or embarrassing to Scotiabank;
- Do not use Scotiabank logos, trademarks, trade name or other proprietary materials without prior approval. Ensure that you follow the branding guidelines of Scotiabank, subsidiary or business line when using Scotiabank logos, trademarks, trade names online;
- Do not promote specific Scotiabank products and services as these may require certain mandatory disclosures when targeted at the public;
- Under no circumstances may inside or confidential information – including information about customers, employees, others or Scotiabank – be posted online. This includes information on Scotiabank’s security procedures, practices or vulnerabilities, as well as images or representations of Scotiabank facilities;
- Do not post or otherwise disclose the confidential information of customers, employees or Scotiabank; and
- Be alert for fraudulent activities and social engineering techniques. Social Engineering is a collection of techniques, including phishing, used to trick you into divulging confidential personal or business information or granting access to secure systems. If you become aware of fraudulent activity, notify Corporate Security.

When you use Scotiabank assets to communicate over its electronic networks, to discuss Bank related matters or to access the Internet for personal or business related use, you must also comply with the following provisions:

- All e-mails sent to a third party from a Scotiabank network must be sent in a bank approved, secure manner and in compliance with applicable policies, procedures and processes;
- You must not use personal e-mail accounts for business purposes – do not send or forward Bank confidential information to these accounts; and
- It is important to ensure that only authorized employees of Scotiabank create and send digital communications including through social media and e-mail.

Personal use of external or internal digital communications should be done responsibly. In your personal postings and communications, you should never provide financial advice, use Scotiabank logos or trademarks or promote rates, fees or services. You should also never disclose confidential information, including results, strategy or other internal information of Scotiabank and ensure that competitors, customers or colleagues are never discussed.

You represent the Bank in all digital communications sent internally or externally for business or personal use at and outside of work. When using social media, e-mail or other digital communication methods consider the potential impact on Scotiabank’s brand, image and reputation. Scotiabank’s expectations in relation to digital communications and social media apply wherever you happen to be: whether in a Scotiabank workplace or not.

For specific guidelines for social media usage, please refer to Scotiabank’s Social Media Policy.
This includes customers, employees, shareholders, suppliers, service providers, governments, regulators, competitors, the media and the public.

Scotiabank is committed to respecting human rights and treating all current and potential employees, customers, shareholders, suppliers, service providers, governments, regulators, competitors, the media and the public fairly, and to maintaining a work environment that supports the productivity, personal goals, dignity and self-respect of all.

This includes commitments to:

- having a work force, at all levels of the organization, that reflects the diverse population of the communities it serves; and

- providing reasonable accommodation to permit qualified persons who face some barrier (e.g. persons with disabilities) to do their jobs.

Diversity is important to the Bank, this is why Scotiabank furthered its commitment to human rights as it became the first Canadian bank to adopt the UN Global LGBTI Standards for Business, as well as signing onto the UN Women’s Empowerment Principles.

I. Diversity, equity and human rights

Discrimination and harassment

Scotiabank is committed to providing an inclusive, respectful and safe environment that is free from discrimination and harassment for all as well as to complying with applicable laws pertaining to discrimination, human rights, and harassment. Your actions are expected to be consistent with these principles and any legal requirements.

Harassment, including sexual harassment, can be a form of discrimination where there is conduct, comment(s), gesture(s), or contact related to prohibited ground(s):

- that is likely to cause offence or humiliation to any individual (for example, bringing images or text of a sexual nature into the workplace, or making discriminatory or sexualized jokes or remarks); or

- that might reasonably be perceived as placing a condition of a discriminatory nature on employment or employment opportunities such as training or promotion, or on the provision of financial services.

Complaints of discrimination or harassment will be dealt with promptly, and treated with seriousness, sensitivity and confidentiality. Retaliation against anyone for having raised concerns or complaints is forbidden and anyone who has raised concerns in good faith are protected from retaliation under the Global Harassment Policy. If retaliation is a concern, you can make use of the Whistleblower Policy.

For more information on Scotiabank’s policies with respect to harassment and discrimination, refer to the Human Rights Policy and Global Harassment Policy.

II. Workplace health and safety

Scotiabank is committed to providing a healthy, safe workplace, in compliance with applicable local laws and regulations. This includes a commitment to providing a workplace that is free from violence by maintaining a respectful, non-threatening work environment.

You have an important role to play in creating and maintaining our healthy and safe work environment by:

- becoming familiar with your roles and responsibilities with respect to health and safety, and acquiring the necessary training to fulfill those roles and responsibilities;

- reporting any condition or practice that you believe may be hazardous using one of the options in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide; and

- treating all those you deal with respectfully and professionally, and never acting in a violent, threatening or abusive manner.

Employees who hold managerial or supervisory roles may have additional health- and safety-related responsibilities and should be guided by any supplementary requirements of their local business unit, as applicable.
To succeed, we must all act in a manner that is environmentally, economically and socially responsible. Doing so will ensure that we are viewed as a welcome partner in the markets in which we operate, and those we seek to enter.

I. Environmental protection
As a major international financial institution, our day-to-day operations have a number of direct and indirect impacts on the environment. Scotiabank has taken steps to mitigate these impacts by adopting policies, procedures and processes with respect to, for example, environmental credit risk, enhanced social and environmental guidelines for project finance loans, and responsible environmental management of our operational footprint.

You are expected to be aware of and comply with those policies, procedures and processes that apply to your area of responsibility.

II. Charitable and community activities
We are committed to making a positive contribution to the communities in which we operate. All donations or support given on behalf of Scotiabank should be made in accordance with applicable policies, procedures and processes.

In special cases, your Manager or another senior officer may approve the use of Scotiabank equipment, facilities or staff time for charitable activities. Otherwise, as much as possible, you should limit charitable and community activities to non-business hours.

III. Political activities
a. Political activities and donations in the name of Scotiabank
To avoid conflicts of interests with political or state entities or the perception of an attempt to encourage favourable treatment of the Bank or a subsidiary, Scotiabank does not make political contributions.

b. Personal political participation
Scotiabank considers participation in the political process to be an important contribution to the community and a personal decision that is subject to their conscience and individual discretion. No one in Scotiabank may require anyone to:

• personally contribute to, support or oppose any candidate or political organization; or
• refrain from personal political activity, providing that activity is not prohibited by law and is not conducted on Scotiabank’s time or using its facilities or resources, does not interfere with job performance, and does not present a conflict of interest.

However, the time and attention devoted to these activities should not interfere with your job performance, or present any other kind of conflict.

Before you run for office or accept a political appointment, discuss your intention with your Manager to ensure there will not be a conflict.

When engaging in personal political activities outside of work, make it clear that those activities are not being conducted on behalf of Scotiabank. The use of Scotiabank equipment, facilities, staff or other resources to conduct political activities is prohibited.

Any questions about your involvement in political fundraising events or activities should be directed to the Government Affairs Department.
IV. Other voluntary commitments and codes of conduct

Some countries, subsidiaries or specialized areas may have voluntary commitments or codes of conduct that apply to you (e.g., industry codes of conduct).

a. Commitments by Scotiabank

It is important that we honour our public commitments and adhere to voluntary undertakings to which Scotiabank has agreed to be bound. You are expected to be aware of and comply with those public commitments that apply to your area of responsibility.

b. Professional codes of conduct

Many professions and professional bodies have codes of conduct or ethics to which they expect their members to adhere. If you come across an instance where your profession’s code of conduct conflicts with this Code, inform your Manager and the Compliance Department immediately. In most cases, you should follow the more stringent requirement to the extent the conflict exists.

You should acquaint yourself with these voluntary commitments or codes of conduct as you may be required to acknowledge them on an annual or other basis.
I. Obligation to report
You are required to immediately report any actual, suspected or potential breaches of the Code including:
• any actual, suspected or potential breach by you or any other person of a policy, procedure, guideline, law, regulatory requirement, or code of conduct;
• any weakness or deficiency in Scotiabank’s policies, procedures, processes or controls that might enable breaches to occur or go undetected; or
• any failure of a supplier, service provider or contractor to adhere to legal requirements or ethical standards comparable to this Code.
Reporting such matters can help protect you and Scotiabank, as well as other employees, customers, shareholders and other stakeholders.
Failing to report is grounds for immediate termination of your employment for cause.

II. Protection from retaliation
Scotiabank will protect from retaliation individuals who, in good faith, report actual, suspected or potential breaches of this Code or violations of law, regulations or internal policies by another director, officer or employee, supplier, service provider or contractor, or problems with Scotiabank’s policies, procedures, processes or controls.
Retaliatory action of any kind against individuals who makes a report in good faith could be grounds for termination of your employment for cause, or in the case of contingent workers, termination of assignment or contract, and may be subject to criminal or civil penalties.
Scotiabank further protects individuals by providing a number of anonymous and confidential methods for the disclosure of wrongdoing or irregularity (see next section).
III. How to Report

a. Need Help Raising a Concern guide

You should report any actual, suspected or potential breach of this Code to your Manager or any Manager as set out in the Need Help Raising a Concern guide (or, where appropriate, under the Whistleblower Policy). Consult a more senior officer if you do not receive what you consider to be a reasonable response from the first person. You can also report harassment or other workplace issues to Employee Relations by contacting Ask HR (in Canada), or to the local Human Resources department or representative.

Actual, suspected or potential breaches of this Code will be dealt with promptly and fairly. However, if you do not feel your complaint or concern has been appropriately resolved, there are other, alternative options available to you.

b. Alternative, confidential avenues

It may not always be appropriate or adequate to report breaches or concerns through Need Help Raising a Concern guide (for example, you may be concerned about the possibility of reprisal by persons involved in an actual, potential or suspected breach of this Code). Scotiabank has therefore created alternative, confidential avenues to disclose breaches, problems and irregularities:

• The Staff Ombuds Office is available to provide confidential advice or assist you in identifying an appropriate way to report your concerns. (For information on how to contact the Staff Ombuds Office, consult the Need Help Raising a Concern guide or Key Sources of Guidance and Advice addendum).

• The Whistleblower Policy outlines the process for reporting accounting and auditing concerns, fraudulent activity or actual, suspected or potential breaches of this Code including concerns related to retaliation or retribution. It includes information on how to report anonymously through an independent third party Hotline and/or directly with Scotiabank’s Chief Auditor. The Policy also provides details on avenues for confidential reporting to the Bank’s Securities Regulators.

c. Getting help or advice

You are expected to know and understand this Code, and conduct yourself in accordance with the Code and the Code principles. If you have any questions or are unsure about any of the principles or requirements of this Code, ask your Manager or a more senior officer. If this is not appropriate, or if you need further guidance, consult the Key Sources of Guidance and Advice addendum.

Whistleblower Program

The program provides a confidential mechanism for individuals to come forward and report suspected misconduct. It receives, tracks, and investigates suspected misconduct to determine whether such reports are substantiated. The program ensures that Bank management takes steps to remediate and determine root causes of the misconduct. Investigations are undertaken on a confidential basis in coordination with key areas across the Bank which are also subject to the confidentiality of the program.
Asset refers to any property of economic value, physical or otherwise, owned by Scotiabank.

Bank means The Bank of Nova Scotia.

Board of Directors means the Board of Directors of Scotiabank.

Competition laws or trade regulations generally prohibit or attach specific conditions to arrangements that:
- restrain or monopolize trade;
- have discriminatory price or service features, which diminish competition;
- unduly restrain competition by requiring that the customer deal only, or primarily, in the company’s products (sometimes called “exclusive dealing”) or that the customer, as a condition of acquiring a specific product, also acquires some other company product (sometimes called “tied selling”); and/or
- represent other methods of competition deemed unfair.

Compliance Department means Scotiabank Global Compliance, including Global Compliance Executive Offices (Toronto), and local and subsidiary Compliance departments.

Computer system means any technology device that accepts information (in the form of digitalized data) and manipulates it based on a program or sequence of instructions on how the data is to be processed. Examples include, but are not limited to: desktops, servers, laptops, mobile devices and tablets.

Confidential business information, sometimes called “non-public information”, is information about Scotiabank or another business that has not been generally disclosed to the public. Confidential business information may include, but is not limited to, financial information, projections, proposed transactions, intellectual property, proprietary processes, trade secrets, and information that might be useful to competitors or information about customers, suppliers, service providers, creditors or shareholders. All information about, or received from, business customers should be presumed to be confidential business information unless the contrary is clear. See also “insider trading”.

Confidential information comprises customer or Employee personal information, confidential business information and any other information about Scotiabank or another business that has not been generally disclosed to the public. See also “personal information” and “confidential business information.”

Conflict of Interest arises when a person or corporation is in a position to derive personal benefit from actions or decisions made in their official capacity such that the impartiality or objectivity of the person or corporation is undermined.

Contingent worker includes:
- agency workers where Scotiabank has a contract with an agency who is the employer of a worker/has retained a worker who is assigned by the agency to provide services to Scotiabank;
- independent contractors, where Scotiabank has entered directly into a contract with an individual (or the company owned by an individual) to provide services to Scotiabank directly; and/or
- service provider workers, where Scotiabank has entered into a contract with a company to provide services to Scotiabank or to complete a project for Scotiabank.

Contingent workers are not employed by Scotiabank and are therefore not paid via payroll by Scotiabank.

Directorship refers to an elected or appointed position on a company’s board of directors.

Discrimination means treating people differently, negatively or adversely because of their race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, age, sex, gender, sexual orientation, marital status, family status, physical or mental disability or other grounds specifically prohibited in the Canadian Human Rights Act or other human rights and anti-discrimination laws that apply to affiliates, subsidiaries or to Scotiabank’s operations globally.

Employees means full-time, part-time and temporary, casual or contract employees of Scotiabank as well as independent contractors.
A fiduciary is someone who has undertaken to act for the benefit of another and is in a position of trust.

Information barriers are the policies, procedures and processes that collectively create barriers restricting access to inside information. This refers in particular to the practice of separating research, sales and trading employees from employees whose jobs make it likely they will encounter inside information.

Inside information is material information that has not been generally disclosed to the public. See also “material information”.

Insider trading is the legally prohibited activity of purchasing or selling securities of a public company, or derivatives linked to that company’s securities, with the knowledge of inside information. See “inside information” and “tipping.”

IIROC is the Investment Industry Regulatory Organization of Canada, which is the national self-regulatory organization which oversees all investment dealers and trading activity on debt and equity marketplaces in Canada.

Laws include any applicable legislation, statutes, regulations, policies, rules and codes of conduct established by governmental, legal or regulatory authority, or by any self-regulatory or industry association by which Scotiabank is or has agreed to be bound.

Manager means your branch manager, department manager, supervisor or unit head. See also the Need Help Raising a Concern guide.

Material Information is information which would reasonably be expected to significantly affect the market price or value of a company’s securities. It can also be information that an investor would likely consider important in deciding whether to buy or sell a company’s securities.

Money laundering is defined as the process of concealing the existence, illegal source, or application of income derived from criminal activity, and the subsequent disguising of the source of that income to make it appear legitimate.

Need Help Raising a Concern guide means Scotiabank’s published guide, Need Help Raising a Concern. Employees or contingent workers of subsidiaries should read this and words such as “Manager” and “department head” in the context of their organizational structure and escalation processes.

Personal information means information about an identifiable individual. This may include, without limitation, the individual’s name, address, signature, date of birth, gender, government-issued identification number (e.g. on a driver’s permit or passport), income, assets, liabilities, financial account numbers, source of funds, payment records, employee number, personal references and health information. Whether or not credit or other services have been extended, and opinions contained in credit or employee files is also personal information. In general, personal information includes any information that could be used to commit identity theft or other forms of fraud. All information about or received from individual customers or employees should be presumed to be personal information unless the contrary is clear. See also “confidential information”.

Policies, procedures, and processes refer to all applicable manuals, handbooks, job aids, forms, policies, practices, procedures, processes, standards, programs and requirements as implemented by Scotiabank, including those that relate to how Scotiabank wishes to manage its business in accordance with its business strategy and risk appetite.

Reasonable and occasional personal use is any non-business activity performed on a Bank owned asset that does not consume significant amounts of resources, does not interfere with business operations or staff productivity, and does not introduce increase risk to the Bank, its employees, customers, shareholders, or the informational assets entrusted to the Bank.

Scotiabank refers to The Bank of Nova Scotia, all of its subsidiaries, and, where applicable, its affiliates.

Subsidiaries means companies owned or controlled in whole or in majority part by Scotiabank.

Terrorist financing means using, transferring, transmitting or dealing with funds or property intended to support terrorist activities.

Tipping is passing “inside information” about a company to another person, except where the conveyance of the information is in the necessary course of business. See “inside information” and “insider trading”.
