Chart 1

Mexico: Industrial Production

Sources: Scotiabank Economics, INEGI, Haver.

Mexican Industrial Production Posts Strong August

• Mexico: Industrial activity gains momentum in August

In August, the Monthly Industrial Activity Indicator (IMAI) rose 3.5% year over year on an unadjusted basis, its strongest performance since April 2024, with gains across nearly all components (chart 1).

Utilities increased 1.6%, their strongest performance since December last year, while construction grew 7.5%, driven by civil engineering works (17.6%) and building construction (7.0%).

Manufacturing also gained momentum, rising 3.2%, its strongest performance since March 2025, supported by the manufacture of petroleum and coal products (21.4%), electronic components (12.2%), and transportation equipment (5.6%), while performance across the remaining manufacturing industries was mixed.

Mining was the only component in negative territory, declining 0.8%, with broad-based contractions across its subcomponents.

On a seasonally adjusted monthly basis, industrial activity increased 0.6%; mining fell 1.8%; utilities rose 1.2%; construction was unchanged; and manufacturing increased 1.2%.
