

LATAM Market Update

- Mexico: In September, headline inflation reached the Central Bank's target for the first time in 3 years

Headline inflation came in at 0.26% m/m in September, in line with market consensus and registering its lowest print for a similar month since 2011. Overall, this positive development was, once again, driven by a lower-than-expected increase in its non-core component, which printed its minimum rate on record (+0.7% y/y). In its annual comparison, headline inflation kept a downward trend in September reaching 3.0% y/y, its lowest level within 3 years and dropping back to the Central Bank's target. On the other hand, core inflation slightly moderated from 3.78% to 3.75% y/y in September, albeit it still remains at relatively high levels. Within the core component, core food prices accelerated to 0.39% m/m and education services rose 2.11% m/m, while other services cost fell -0.2% m/m due to the decline in professional services (-16.7% m/m).

These prints reinforce our view that the Central Bank will continue to cut interest rates at its next meeting in November, to 7.5%. Although core inflation has remained persistent around 3.8%, recent headline inflation dynamics has been sufficient for lowering the overnight interest rate by 25bp in the past two meetings, in which two out of five members of the Board argued for a more aggressive easing.
